

Call for papers
Game Theory Society's 2011 Summer Festival
Two-day workshop (Tuesday-Wednesday July 19-20) on Applications of Game Theory in Trade and Development

The two-day workshop will consist of four sessions. Each session will have three papers: one invited overview paper, and two contributed new research papers. The themes of the sessions, and the invited presenters of the overview papers, are as follows:

1. International negotiations on international trade and related issues
(investment, intellectual property rights, environment etc)
Kyle Bagwell, Stanford University
2. Foundations of constitutions and their implications for development
Roger Myerson, University of Chicago
3. Trade and investment in developing countries and transition economies with poor governance
Avinash Dixit, Princeton University
4. Design of incentives and organizations for provision of public services in developing countries
Timothy Besley, London School of Economics

Submissions for contributed papers should be sent to me as PDF files attached to e-mail messages. Complete papers are preferred but detailed abstracts are acceptable. In the e-mail message please state for which of the four sessions you are submitting your paper.

The deadline for submissions is March 15, 2011 and decisions will be conveyed by April 15.

Avinash Dixit, workshop organizer dixitak@princeton.edu